What is collective individuality? We hear talk of being a community and as humans we don't like to give up our personality and individuality, seemingly putting us at odds with the idea of a Christian community. When you think about it though, maybe it is possible to have both. Paul talks in his letters about being members of a body and how each of us has a role in keeping the idea of collective Christianity going. Without any one of us the body fails. Certainly there is room for individuality in the collectiveness that is our campus. As we go through our four years (sometimes a little less, sometimes much more) on this hill, we meet people, make close friends, and grow into our own person. We mature, grow smarter, experience new things, and find out new ways to relate to people. We learn what it means to be an individual and how to live in relationships with other individuals. We learn what it means to be a body and a cohesive group of like-minded people. That's what the 2005 Darda is all about. We are a cohesive group of like-minded people, all with our own personalities and little things that make us different from each other. Yet we can still exist together. We are all collective individuals.

Millard C. Reed exemplifies the “pastor’s heart,” and that fact is no surprise. He grew up in a parsonage and then spent his working years in ministry settings—from 1951 to 1991 in churches and then from 1991 to 2005 as the president-pastor of Trevecca. Serving and loving others has always been central to his calling—wherever that call led him. He was the pastor of churches in Oregon and St. Louis, Missouri; Kenosha, Wisconsin; Overland Park, Kansas; and Nashville, Tennessee. In 1991 he was elected president of Trevecca, and the college and its people became the focus of his pastor’s heart.

C.

Reed

Under his leadership Trevecca began a transformation that included significant accomplishments:

- Unfunded scholarship assistance increased from $0.6 million to $4.84 million
- Increased the number of students participating in intercollegiate athletics to 140
- Increase of average ACT score of incoming freshmen to 21.9
- The change to Trevecca Nazarene University
- The construction of a new entry to Trevecca
- The addition of a doctoral program in education
- The completion of the largest capital campaign in the history of Trevecca (and also for any other Nazarene institution)
 - The construction of Waggoner Library
 - The largest enrollment in Trevecca history (2,089 in 2004)

Even with all these accomplishments, Dr. Reed still made time to teach a class for students who were called to ministry. His pastor's heart was evident in his life of service that became a life of leadership in Nazarene churches and at Trevecca.

One of the most important parts of the college experience, university life, is inherently wrapped up in collective individuality. As we students move through our years on this hill, we cannot become the people we should be without others. We cannot become fulfilled unless we have people around who can help fill us. While we each have our own likes and dislikes, personalities and faults, without a collective group of people none of our traits can be fully realized. Even the most trivial action, such as walking to and from classes, takes on added significance when we do it with other people. Without collectiveness we cannot truly become individuals.

Welcome Week was again a huge success as both returning and new students got a chance to have some fun and meet each other before classes began for the semester. 80s Skate Night was a favorite as usual, and every event from the Block Party to Grand Old Golf and Go-Karts to the Back to School Bash had a great turnout. A new event this year was a concert featuring nationally recognized musician Dave Barnes out in the Quad. The Social Life Committee rented professional lighting and stage equipment, a first for a Trevecca event, and publicised the event around Nashville, bringing a number of non-Trevecca students to the campus.

The social center of campus for many years, The Hub, was very much in need of the renovation brought about through the 2004 All-School Project. Students had input on the design of the new Hub, and a professional firm was brought in to carry out the students' ideas. After a generous donation from an anonymous alumnus, work began in earnest to get the Hub ready for school in the fall. By the time students arrived at campus to start the new year, the formerly drab Hub had a fresh paint scheme and a stage for live performances, and tables and chairs and computers arrived just in time for Homecoming. By the time the project was finished, the refurbished Hub included new paint, redone flooring and lighting, reupholstered and new furniture (including couches, chairs, tables, and barstools), a big-screen television, a rearranged mailroom, a computer bar, and wireless Internet access.

The students also had time to relax and play games, such as dodgeball, kickball, and Ping-Pong.

With the theme “Thanks for the Memories,” Homecoming 2004 helped Trevecca alumni and friends rekindle old memories and create some new ones. Alumni and visitors filled the sanctuary of Trevecca Community Church of the Nazarene to hear Karen Dean Fry '68, the guest speaker for Founder’s Day Chapel. Echoing the words of Mother Teresa, Fry challenged her listeners: “Let’s do something beautiful for God.”

The Homecoming Parade, sponsored by the sophomore class, included more than forty floats and entries, including submissions from local ministries and businesses along Murfreesboro Road. This year’s grand marshal, President Millard Reed, descended on the parade route by helicopter and then chose to ride on the Johnson Hall float—a favor to his granddaughter, who lives in Johnson. Other honored guests in the parade were the two winners of the annual Alumni Awards, Fred Faith and Bruce Oldham, and the class representatives in the Homecoming court. Members of the campus community lined the driveway to the school and the path of the parade.

Friday evening entertainment included two basketball games, the induction ceremony for persons elected to the Trevecca Athletic Hall of Fame, the presentation of the Homecoming court and the crowning of King Dan Mistak and Queen Shandie Cline, two performances of Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat, and several class reunions and informal alumni gatherings.

Reunion gatherings continued on Saturday as classes and other groups met. Alumni gathered for lunch in Moore Gymnasium. During the afternoon alumni groups continued their socializing—playing in informal soccer games, seeing the sights of Nashville, and catching up on each other's lives.

Homecoming moved from the TNU campus to the sanctuary of First Church of the Nazarene for the evening concert. Using the theme "Thanks for the Memories," the concert was an expression of thanks from retiring President Reed for the life of service and ministry that God and the church had made possible for him. The songs in the program were chosen because they are his favorites. Members of University musical groups performed, an alumnus and a former Trevecca quartet sang, and the Alumni Awards were presented.

Homecoming 2004 was a huge success, with alumni and students coming together to remember special times in Trevecca's history and to say goodbye to Dr. Reed. Classes showed off their creative sides, the basketball teams showed promise of very successful seasons, Trevecca showed alumni a brand-new Hub, and alumni showed former classmates how they had changed through the years while remembering their past at Trevecca.

Scamboat returned again this year to its normal time in the fall and included a few new events along with the usual karaoke and music. In past year the second level of the boat usually had card games or movies playing but this time much of the floor was taken up by a giant Twister mat. The open top level again had people trying to sing while their friends laughed, and downstairs Graham High and Kit Young tried their hands at stand-up comedy in between music sets led by Junior Rob Walls. In past years the only scam on Scamboat was kissing a significant other under a bridge but this year VP for Social Life Dustin Orner got Adam Gleaves and Mandy Middleton to stage a fake wedding proposal in which Mandy turned Adam down, a scam which fooled many students and had people talking all the way off the boat and back to school. Holding Scamboat in the fall again allowed for warmer weather and less school stress, bringing more students out for the event than in previous years. With the new events and large turnout, this year's Scamboat was an unqualified success.

Trojan Idol 2.

One of the most discussed and well-attended social life events last year was Trojan Idol, a spoof of the popular reality television show American Idol. This year's second annual Trojan Idol was no different. A whopping thirty-five people tried out before student judges in hopes of becoming one of the fifteen contestants to make it to the actual event, held over two nights in a packed Benson Auditorium. The first night of competition saw the lucky students who made it on stage sing the song of their choice in front of students and three celebrity judges. The students in the audience each had a slip of paper with each singer's name on it, and the students checked off the five people they wanted to hear in the final round. The votes were tallied as host Dan Mistak told jokes to fill time, and then the five finalists were announced: Chance Perdue, Samantha Yangmi, Laura Sweeney, Lindsay Haywood, and Nick Robertson. The second night of Trojan Idol saw the finalists sing two songs each in front of another packed house and three different celebrity judges. Once again the votes were tallied while the students waited, and then all the contestants were brought back on-stage. The suspense ended when Nick Robertson was announced as the winner, giving him free recording time and a monetary prize.

Trojan Championship Wrestling made its debut at Trevecca this year and featured students dressed up and wrestling each other in the style of professional wrestling on television. Social Life Director Dustin Orner planned the event and brought in a pro-style ring and training for the wrestlers. Each match was choreographed, planned, and practiced before the event and then performed in front of a packed house in the gym. Each of the wrestlers picked a stage name and a costume designed to get the crowd more involved, and the event culminated in a royal rumble match with all the wrestlers in the ring at once.

This year's presentation of the annual Friday Night Live event was a huge success, and many students thought it was one of the best FNLs they'd seen in their years at Trevecca. Despite the usual slight audio/video problems that seem to plague Benson Auditorium, the skits were pulled off with skill and, most of the time, big laughs. Highlights from FNL include Dr. Reed quoting the famous "Live from Trevecca, it's Friday Night" line to start the show, student-made videos, the Lion King skit, which featured elaborate costumes and choreography in an homage to Disney's movie, the Weekend Update skit, which included a weather report from God, and the "New Trevedores" skit, which showed off lip-synching, dancing, and wheelchair stuntwork. The special musical guest was Michael Logen, a Trevecca favorite, and the house band, composed of students entertained the crowd between skits with a selection of well-known songs. All in all, one of the most-anticipated social life activities of the year turned out to be one of the year's best events.

Live

In November the Residence Hall Association sponsored the annual ice skating event. For some students, this event was an occasion to show off their ice skating skills. For other students, who had never skated before, this event was a learning experience. For everyone it was a fun opportunity to get off campus, mingle with people from around Nashville, hang out with friends, throw balls of shaved ice at each other, and watch people nervously stumble and fall down on the rink. While many students came away from the night with sore muscles and bruised egos, those who attended the event were glad for the chance to escape the stress of classes and work for a few hours and have some fun.

The annual Date Auction, sponsored by the junior class, raised money for the Junior-Senior Banquet in the spring. Groups of students from every class dressed up and embarrassed themselves on stage while those in the audience bid on the people they wanted to go on a date with the most. A few of the students braved the spotlight by themselves, but most of the participants auctioned themselves off in groups in order to raise more money. Students not brave enough to take part in the auctioning filled the quad and shouted bids on their friends, while some found the courage to bid on people they actually wanted to go on a date with. Some of the highlights were the group of girls with shirts that spelled out "buy us" on the front and Jeff Whiting taking his shirt off to the cheers of the crowd.

Life at Trevecca for most students is filled with classes, projects, studying, homework, internships, and jobs. Thankfully though, even with this busy schedule there is always time for spending time with friends in the dorms. Free time in Benson Hall (the guys' dorm) and the guys' apartments usually consists of watching television, playing video games, watching movies, sleeping, and playing made-up variations of shuffleboard out in the halls. The girls' dorms and apartments are much the same except for less wrestling and video games and more knitting.

One way for students to express their collective individuality is to decorate their rooms with posters, paintings, lamps, furniture, and carpet. A walk through each dorm reveals the different styles and personalities expressed in dorm room decorations. Rooms that consist of the same general elements are, nevertheless, as different as the people living in them.

College

The dorm lobbies are always popular places to hang out. The lobbies have games, televisions, magazines, and other forms of entertainment to help students pass time and relax.

Benson Hall also includes a large lower lobby with ping pong, air hockey and pool tables, and a large video game room with four televisions and a state-of-the-art video game system for each one. These opportunities for entertainment and relaxation give the guys who live there other options for their free time and lets them fellowship with friends as they play games. On the other end of campus, while the girls' dorms don't have game tables and video game system like Benson Hall, the RAs of Georgia, Johnson, and Tennessee Halls will plan many activities to help residents forget about the stresses of academic life.

Spring break is a time used by many Trevecca students to escape the monotony of school and Nashville, and many used Florida and other sunny spots for that escape. For other students, spring break is a time to see places of the United States and the world they've never seen before. No matter how long the car ride or plane trip is, students use the week to get away from the stress and work of school and instead spend time getting to know their friends a little better in new surroundings. Rarely do any students spend spring break by themselves; instead, most students promote the "collective individuality" theme as they travel in groups, each taking individual memories of the trip but realizing the trip would not be the same without the people who went along.

A wildly popular spring event, the Mr. TNU pageant, again packed out Benson Auditorium as students gathered to watch members of each class dress up and do skits, all in hope of winning the title of "Mr. TNU 2005." The competition started as usual with a choreographed dance number, this time involving swimwear. The first category of the night was the Drag Queen category, and a few of the guys brought gasps from the audience at how natural they looked as members of the fairer gender. Next up was the Celebrity Lookalike portion, containing everything from Braveheart to Andy Kaufman to Mother Theresa. The Sportswear competition followed, and the guys showed off their athletic prowess. Last was the Talent category, and the audience was surprised by the previously masked skills of their classmates. The field was then narrowed to five contestants—Scott Oldham, Chad Uram, Ben Ewing, Tommy Byler, and Levi Gilbert. The five semi-finalists were then cut to three—Chad, Tommy, and Levi. Each of the three was then asked a question from last year's Mr. TNU, Graham High, and had to come up with a spontaneous answer in front of all his classmates. The scores from the three judges—Graham, Jen Wyatt, and Jonathan Duranceau—were then totaled, and senior Levi Gilbert was announced as the winner and holder of the title "Mr. TNU 2005."

Trevecca's 104th Commencement went off without a hitch after the day dawned clear and warm. This graduating class was the school's largest in history with 826 graduates including Trevecca's first ever graduating master's of arts in teaching (MAT) class. This Commencement was Dr. Millard Reed's last as president, and after he gave the traditional challenge to the graduates, Emily Baggett (senior class president), Jim Carroll (MHR representative), and Barbara Cannon (graduate studies representative) gave their responses. The degrees and awards were given out to the cheers of friends and family members, and the crowd was led in Trevecca's Alma Mater. Dr. Reed then gave his final graduation blessing, and the graduates left their seats to say their goodbyes to the friends they'd made during their time here.

Collective individuality is a very important part of spiritual life. While each of us students has our own beliefs and leanings, at the same time we can come together at Trevecca to be ministered to and to minister to others. Taking the example of Christ, who was an individual but also took the collective weight of humanity on himself as God, we can work with each other to bear the collective weight of a campus while still being separate people. In campus ministries are seen examples of this idea of collective individuality as we go to chapel, travel to other countries to witness, volunteer in the community, and meet in small groups for fellowship. The idea of being a group of individuals working together for a common goal is an important one in the Christian life and is one that is a part of life here at Trevecca.

Spiritual

Life

Every Tuesday and Wednesday at 10:30 students come together in Trevecca Community Church to worship and fellowship, strengthening both the spiritual life and the collective cohesiveness of the campus. Guest speakers and Trevecca professors challenge students in different areas while student-led worship helps bring the campus into a readiness to hear God. This year's chapel theme, given as a challenge by Chaplain Tim Green, was to be "rooted" in Christ instead of just taking "spiritual drugs" that do not do anything for one's spiritual maturity.

In June 2004 the Trevecca Around the Globe (TAG) Team embarked on a two-week trip to Florence, Italy, a trip that replaced the annual summer Cause mission trip. During their stay, they spent time working at the Church of the Nazarene in Florence, renovating several rooms of the church and patching the sewer line outside of the building. A favorite activity of the team was "bar hopping," a form of outreach and witnessing. The team visited the local coffee shops each day and did their best to spark up a conversation with anyone working in the coffee shop or even sitting at the table next to them. The team also spent their time "prayer walking" on the streets surrounding the church. The students prayed for people as they passed and prayed that the church would have an effective ministry in the neighborhood. The students also had time to relax and see some of Italy's more famous landmarks.

The 2004 T.A.G. Team consisted of the following students and faculty sponsors: JoAnn Blevins, Jenn Wyatt, Tim Green, Brian Walkup, Dana Winsinger, Kelly Bargo, James Kleppinger, Wade Munday, Kit Young, Joe Crosby, Ben Steffes, Tessa Eller, April Huff, Lauren Collins, Kim Niece, Lauren Gaskill, Bethany Mitchell, Anita Dodson, Courtney Hobgood, Katie Humerickhouse, Ashley Reed, Candace Peacock, and Chris Willard.

above: Brandon Whiteside leads a weekly gathering of The Feast, a new campus ministry that brings together students in celebration and worship of God and his presence in our lives.

The Feast, a new ministry introduced to Trevecca during the 2004-2005 school year, is led by sophomore Brandon Whiteside. His vision of students coming together and worshipping the Lord in an intimate and personal way has translated into weekly gatherings focused on feasting at the table of God's presence. Whether in prayer, praise, sharing testimonies, or corporate worship, The Feast is a time for students to boldly and vulnerably come before the Lord and experience the closeness and nearness of God in spite of all of the distractions of daily life.

The Feast is no drive-thru worship experience—it's an opportunity for students to park and savor the presence of the Lord. As in the parable of the Great Banquet in Luke 14, The Feast brings students to the banquet table of the Lord to feast on his presence, to find joy in him, and to be satisfied in his presence alone. Students are welcomed to experience the freedom of Christ and to be tenacious worshippers of God at The Feast.

In its second year as a campus ministry, Lifeline grew in numbers and frequency this year as students met every day after chapel to pray for the needs of the campus. Led by senior James Ericson, the students would take a few minutes before class or lunch to bring prayer requests before God. Sharing these requests with each other not only allowed students to be able to pray for people they didn't specifically know, but it also built closeness and unity among the Lifeline group and on the campus as a whole as students met at a specific time twice a week to pray.

Youth in Mission is a national organization which organizes students from all over the country for mission trips, and Trevecca again sent a large group overseas, with thirteen students giving up a large part of their summers to travel to another country for the purpose of sharing Jesus with others. Students enjoyed fellowshipping with other Christians in other countries, learning new languages and traditions, seeing unfamiliar parts of the globe, and teaching others about their faith.

The Youth in Mission team for this year was Beth Bleadingheiser (advance training), Jenna Blankenship (Kosovo), Christina Cook (Uganda), Tommy Moore (Slovenia), kimberly Adams (Madagascar), Carolyn Pratt (Peru), Stanton Lee (Vanatu), Hannah Reynard (China), Karen Berger (Uganda), Christy Montoya (South Africa), Bethany Williams (Camp Taconic, New York), Angie Taylor (Croatia), Rebekah Ball (Australia), Sara Frakes (advance training), Heath Attig (Italy), Katherine Chepulis (advance training), Julie Lalone (advance training), Lindsay Gunter (Italy), and Greg Lyon (Trinidad).

After Hurricane Jeanne came and went, four major hurricanes had hit the southeastern United States, especially Florida, costing an estimated $402 million in damages in the Clearwater area alone, not to mention the millions it cost the rest of the ocean-bordered state. The devastation shocked the entire country and it was obvious that Ivan, Charley, Frances, and Jeanne had done more than ruin vacations; for many, some even students at Trevecca, the hurricanes had ruined lives.

It was at this point that sixteen people from the Trevecca community were provided the opportunity to give something back to one of the Nazarene Churches in Florida, sacrificing their much-needed fall break in the process. With the blessings of Dean Johnson, the convoy of two full-size vans made its way to Port St. Lucie, Florida on Friday morning, October 8.

Hurricane Relief... fall break 2004

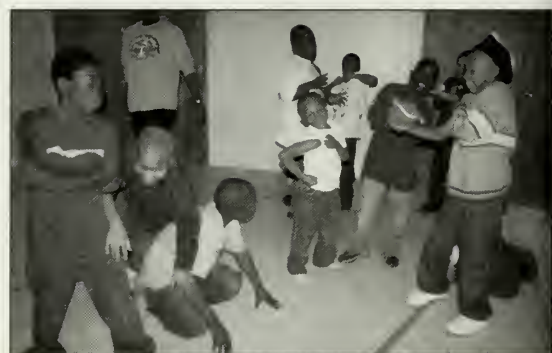

The team consisted of Jesse Aguirre, Caleb Haynes, Don Kintner, Nick Kroes, Mike Kurtz, Jonathan Moore, Scott Oldham, Dustin Orner, Travis Rexroth, Michael Rhodes, Kenneth Sawyer, Kimbre Taylor, Cody Turner, Brandi Wood, Jennifer Wyatt, and Samantha Yangmi. A nearby church, Palm City New Hope Church of the Nazarene opened its doors and offered up its teen room couches for the group's sleeping accommodations.

On Saturday and Monday, while many students enjoyed the comforts of home, these fourteen students and two adult leaders braved the elements to help put new roofing on the Port St. Lucie Church of the Nazarene, most never having done roofing work before. With funds provided by the district and offerings from all over the denomination, workers were able to restore the church roof in just two days.

King's Kids is a campus ministry that reaches out to the children and families of the Napier Community. Every Tuesday night Trevecca students bring children (kindergarten through fifth grade) to Trevecca Community Church of the Nazarene for a variety of activities, including sports, crafts, cheerleading, and a weekly Bible lesson. Other special seasonal activities include fall and spring carnivals, and Thanksgiving and Easter dinners. The mission of King's Kids is to share God's love with the children and their families and to provide a safe place for the kids to have fun and learn more about God's Word.

Angel Tree is a ministry through which students of Trevecca and groups associated with Trevecca sponsor area children who would not normally receive gifts for Christmas. Trevecca students are able to sign up for an “angel” in the weeks leading up to the Angel Tree event and then go out and purchase gifts for them and give those gifts out at the annual Christmas party. This year the campus ministries council was able to recruit more than 120 student and faculty sponsors for approximately 200 “angels.”

The tradition of the Angel Tree Ministry began the Christmas of 1998 under the leadership of University Chaplain Tim Green. Since then, sponsors have provided merriment and gifts for children who might otherwise have a bleak holiday season, specifically children who have a parent who is in prison.

Angel Tree Christmas Party

Student Body Chaplain Greg Lyon helped organize this year's event, which began with the children and their guardians and "angel" sponsors meeting each other in the Apple Dining Room as they waited for dinner. Pioneer Food Services served a special meal, one that was appealing to the children because it included a perennial favorite, macaroni and cheese.

Following the meal, Rob Allred shared the Christmas story from the Bible. Gifts were then distributed to the children and opened, and finally the group made their way across campus to TSAC where they had time to play with the gifts and watch a movie.

The Crux ministry, in its third year, continued to grow and send out groups of students to Nazarene churches across the Southeast. Led this year by Jamin Wentworth, each Crux group, made up of students from every walk of life on campus, traveled to churches and led morning or evening services while interacting with the congregation. For many students, Crux participation was a chance to see parts of the country they had never seen before while at the same time ministering to Nazarenes and promoting Trevecca in the churches.

above: Members of the Trevecca Health Care community wait happily for the students who minister them to arrive. The Health Care ministry and the Saints ministry helped connect students with some of the often-forgotten members of the community.

Through the Trevecca Health Care ministry students have the chance to minister to campus residents who may not get a chance for much fellowship without them. Students visited patients in the Health Care Center weekly to brighten the days of the patients there. Often the residents of the Health Care Center are largely forgotten by the Trevecca community, but the students involved in this ministry bring another group into the idea of collective individuality through their visits to their friends.

Saints, a ministry led by Josh Baxter, is another ministry that helps non-students residents find fellowship and happiness. Every Sunday the students in Saints went to the Towers and held a church service for those who could not go to church off-campus. The students planned the services and the Towers residents participate in prayer, singing, and testimony. The lives of both the students and the Towers residents were enriched by these weekly services and help to foster closeness in our community.

Health Care and Saints

above: Jacob Courtney leads worship during a weekly FCA meeting, held in a classroom in Moore Gymnasium. The group tried a new strategy this year, renaming their ministry to allow for more student attendance.

FCA usually stands for Fellowship of Christian Athletes, however, this year's Trevecca FCA decided to change the name to Fellowship of Christian Anybodies in order to make the group more inclusive. FCA met once a week for Bible studies that were informative, encouraging, and inspiring. Besides the weekly gathering, FCA activities included linking up with Nashville-area college FCAs, including Belmont and Vanderbilt, hosting guest speakers, an FCA Advance retreat (college FCAs from around Tennessee came to Nashville for a weekend), hosting events during the Trevecca TNT week, and conducting a 3-on-3 basketball tournament in the spring.

Fellowship of Christian Athletes

As much as the other sections of this book show the idea of collective individuality, perhaps none of them do it as well as the People section. In these pages we find separate people grouped into classes, offices, divisions, and schools, but all of the persons pictured retain their own personalities and individuality. Without individuals there would be no groups, but without the groups there would be no way to categorize and give meaning to the individuals in these pages. People are what make this campus exist. Without people there is no concept of collective individuality. All of the classrooms on this hill would be empty without individuals, yet without groups there would be no need for those classrooms. The group depends on individuals, and vice-versa.

Athletics, by its nature, is a show of collective individuality. We've all heard the sayings like "There is no I in team" and "A team is only as strong as its weakest link." There is truth to those sayings. While a team is a group working toward a common goal, a team is made up of individuals. Single individuals and all their strengths and weaknesses make up a team and become something greater than themselves. At the university level especially, great emphasis is placed on the work of the team over the work of the individual. Even for those of us not on athletic teams, there is collective individuality in watching the games and cheering for our teams. A group of us can cheer louder than any one of us, and we have more fun with friends at the game than by ourselves. Even in athletics, the idea of collective individuality is very present.

The 2004 season was a rebuilding one for the Lady Trojans. After the head coach of both the men's and women's soccer teams, Stan Herod, resigned in the spring, his assistant, Mark Champion, took the reigns of the five-year-old women's program and led the Lady Trojans to their finest conference standing yet. At 3-14-2 during the regular season (2-2 in the TransSouth Conference), the women headed into the Conference Tournament in third place and remained there after losing to Cumberland University in first-round play. The Lady Trojans look forward to growing as a team and with their new coach in the coming seasons.

The men's soccer team began the season playing nine of its first ten games on the road and never quite gathered the momentum needed through first-year Head Coach Jeff Carr's inaugural season. The team was a young one with many newcomers to the program, a new recruiting program, and a few key losses from last year, including its starting goalie and a premier forward, but the team still managed to be competitive against tough teams, including four NCAA opponents. With the building blocks in place, the Trojans plan to gain more experience and success in the years to come.

After a very successful 2003 season which saw the women's volleyball team set many school records and achieve a second-place finish in the TranSouth Conference, 2004 was a rebuilding year because of injuries and the loss of experienced seniors. Seven freshmen joined the team while only three veterans remained. Because of the relative youth of the team and a tough non-conference schedule, the Lady Trojans finished the season with four wins and twenty-two losses. However, many of the losses were close matches with the team often barely losing in the fifth game, showing that the Lady Trojans will be very competitive in years to come.

After starting the season with only one senior and eight eligible players, the Lady Trojans managed to put together the most successful season in team history. The team started the season 24 before knocking off seven straight opponents, and it went into conference play with the return of a full roster. The Trojans finished with an undefeated record in road games in TranSouth play, a first in school history, and entered the conference tournament as a second seed, the highest in school history. After losing in the semifinals, the team earned a trip to the NAIA National Tournament, their sixth appearance in a row. Seeded third, the Lady Trojans won two games, going to the Elite Eight for the first time and beating perennial power Southern Nazarene. Junior Jackie Weaver was named to the NAIA All-American Second Team, Ashlie Gilland was named to the NAIA All-Tournament Team, Jana Reed, Gilland, and Weaver were named to the All-TranSouth First Team, and Mariska Reed was named to the TranSouth All-Freshman Team.

Despite severe tragedy before and during the season, the Trojans managed to overcome and put together one of the most successful seasons in school history. After losing senior Robert Garrett before the school year, the team started the season with a school-record nine straight wins and a debut at No. 6 on the first NAIA poll of the season. The team claimed big wins over highly ranked teams, was undefeated on the road in conference play, and took NCAA Division-I Tennessee State to overtime. Near the end of the regular season, senior point guard and team leader Brandon Howard suffered a career-ending leg injury. The team rallied around freshman point guard Alex Renfro, winning four of the final five games and earning the TranSouth regular season title. The Trojans earned a trip to the NAIA National Tournament, where they won their first tournament game since 1987. Senior Eric Price was named to the NAIA All-American Second Team and was the TranSouth Player of the Year, Sam Harris was the TranSouth Coach of the Year, Brandon Howard and Wes Poe were named to the All-TranSouth First Team, Jerod Perry was named to the All-TranSouth Second Team, and Collins Onyando and Josh Helton were named to the TranSouth All-Freshman Team.

The Lady Trojans softball team, in spite of a change of coach and the loss of an All-American pitcher, put together a record-setting season this year. The team started the season with 26 wins in a row, a school record and also the third-longest winning streak in NAIA softball history. The team made its debut at No. 25 in the first regular season NAIA poll and climbed all the way to No. 14 before losing its first game. The team continued to win as the season wore on and earned the TranSouth Conference Championship. Despite being upset in the conference tournament, the team earned a berth to the NAIA Region XI Tournament, and several of the team members earned individual conference and NAIA honors for their success.

The Trevecca men's baseball team, under Head Coach Jeff Forehand in his fifth year, had its most successful season ever this year, with a school-record 45 wins and a trip to the NAIA National Tournament. With most of the players returning after one of the best offensive seasons in team history in 2004, the team was poised to be even more successful this season. The Trojans opened the season slowly with a 4-6 record through their first ten games but then went on a tear the rest of the season, notching 41 more wins and only 9 more losses for a season record of 45-15, the best record in school history. The team finished the regular season ranked eighth in the NAIA poll and earned the TranSouth Conference Tournament No. 1 seed. The Trojans then went on to win the conference tournament, earning an automatic bid to the NAIA National Tournament.

A large part of Trevecca life is the various clubs, organizations, and arts around campus. Whether it's Phi Beta Lambda, the dorm RAs, or the drama department's latest presentation, there is one unifying factor: dependence on a group to make it work. Without a group of individuals working together there would be no clubs, there would be no Trevecca publications, there would be no Resident Housing Association, and there would be no plays presented by students. Without a collective individuality, there would be no audience and no performances.

below right: Team Dynasty won the TIA dodgeball championship this year. One of the more controversial TIA teams, Dynasty always brings out students to either cheer or jeer them.

Under the leadership of second-year TIA Director Ben Bledsoe, this year's intramural sports were huge successes as more students participated and attended the games than ever before. The year started off with dodgeball, a campus favorite from last year. This year every dodgeball team had to have a theme and costumes, and many students took the chance to show off their creativity and senses of humor by dressing up for their matches.

The big sport in the fall was flag football, and more teams signed up this season than ever had in the history of Trevecca intramural flag football. A few of the teams resurrected heated rivalries from last year, creating a buzz around campus that brought a large number of students to many of the games. The tournament included many close results, including upsets of then-undefeated Team Bratwurst by Team Dynasty and Team Whisp, who only had one loss, to Team Mezime.

Trevecca Intramural Association

The popularity of TIA basketball, the main winter and spring sport, led to the creation of three separate divisions including one co-ed division. Each division had at least six teams, and more than 200 students and faculty signed up to play in at least one of the three divisions. Each league was highly competitive and the bleachers were packed for most of the games as students came out to the gym to watch their friends compete against each other.

Because Bledsoe is graduating this year, the incoming director has huge shoes to fill; however, with so many students getting involved in the different TIA sports, the future for the Trevecca Intramural Association looks very bright.

Trevechoes, the official student newspaper of Trevecca, continued to improve this year under the guidance of second-year Editor-in-Chief Eric Johnson. With an entirely new staff, Johnson managed to keep up the level of quality seen in the previous year's newspaper while adding to and refining the paper. Scott Oldham was the Campus Life editor, Kevin Burmeister was the Feature editor, Caleb Paquette edited the Opinion section, Justin Hoag was the Arts and Entertainment editor, and Billy Byler pulled double duty as the Sports editor and, for the third year in a row, writer of "The Back Page." The newspaper was published bi-weekly and included a color edition that came out the week of Homecoming.

The Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development (ASCD) is a national organization devoted exclusively to the purpose of enhancing the professional development of educators. Trevecca's student chapter of ASCD is led by faculty sponsor Dr. Julie Simmons and the student leadership team. Meetings for ASCD members are scheduled numerous times throughout the year and provide a time to inform members about upcoming events and activities for education majors. Although ASCD is one of the smaller clubs on campus, membership increased considerably this year. New members were inducted in a candlelight ceremony just in time for such events as a book talk with Rhonda Todd, the Scholastic Book Fair, several workshops, a yardsale, and a national conference in Orlando, Florida. ASCD members acquired professional development as future educators and grew spiritually.

The SGA Executive Council is a group of leaders elected yearly by the students to plan events, oversee the spiritual life on campus, run student publications, and represent the student population to the Trevecca administration and the student governments of the other Nazarene universities. The 2004 Executive Council included Student Body President Jonathan Moore, VP for Finance Kim Nyce, Chaplain Greg Lyon, TIA Director Ben Bledsoe, Secretary Celesta Cox, RHA Representative Shelley Gilmore, VP for Social Life Dustin Orner, VP for Public Relations Lindsay Gunter, TrevEchoes Editor Eric Johnson, and Darda Editor Josh Shope. The Executive Council met regularly to update each other on events so that every area on campus could be covered and also planned and held weekly SGA meetings with the class councils and members of administration.

The 2004 Trevecca drama department season kicked off with a bang with the fall performance of Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat, presented for two weeks, including Homecoming week. Drama department professor Jeff Frame threw his own twists onto Andrew Lloyd Weber's classic musical, including video cameras and video screens, flashing lights, and other types of multimedia designed to add a "reality-television" feel to the story, easily making it the most technologically advanced performance in Trevecca drama department history.

The spring drama production, Schoolhouse Rock, brought the fun teaching from the well-known television show to a whole new generation as area schoolchildren who were too young to have watched the show on tv experienced musical numbers such as "I'm Just a Bill" and "Conjunction Junction." The production was also a hit with Trevecca students and adults as they remembered the Saturday-morning show they used to love.

The Treble Tones are an all-female singing group that performs in chapels and events on Trevecca's campus. Led this year by Delise Hall, the Treble Tones made up for their small number with enthusiasm for their singing, showing the people who heard them their love for the songs. While the Treble Tones do not perform often, whenever they do, the concert is special because of their use of non-traditional, sometimes unfamiliar, songs and their passion for performing.

The Madrigalians, an a capella singing group led by Tim Cierpke, put together a new lineup of traditional madrigals, sacred Latin songs, and modern pieces and held concerts in churches and public buildings in Nashville to raise money for their yearly trip to Europe. This trip gives the group the opportunity to perform their pieces in some of the most famous cathedrals in the world and see where some of the music they sing was created. The Madrigalians also traditionally hold a dinner to raise money for the trip and introduce their songs to more people. The theme of this year's dinner was "Joe's Diner" and was set as a 1940s Italian restaurant murder mystery.

Darda readers, I am coming to you for the fourteenth and last time as president. Back in 1991, the action of the board brought me to this office, and I was soon responding to the invitation of the editor to prepare "Comments from the President." It has been a joy to watch the work done by previous editors, and I commend Editor Josh Shope for the work done in this volume.

I was surprised and pleased when the announcement was made in the Awards Chapel that I was the honoree of this year's Darda. It is an honor indeed, and I am deeply grateful for the kindness of the editorial staff.

In my Vision Statement, published in 1994, "I envision(ed) a school where each scholar/learner will seek to hear and respond to the call to be holy in heart and in practice. . . ." "I envision(ed) a growing and diversified student population on Trevecca's campus and in its extensions, in undergraduate and graduate studies in traditional and non-traditional programs, who are seeking to discern God's pattern for their lives and then preparing for that calling."

As I now retire, I look back over these fourteen years with a deep sense of gratitude that, in fact, the earlier hoped-for vision has been and is being realized. I commend every phase of the campus community for the devotion to Christ and a desire to be used as servant leaders.

I am leaving my familiar office now and will only be on campus from time to time in the interest of the school, but I ask that you will hold me in your prayers and remember me fondly as one who tried to help you know and do God's will.

Epilogue

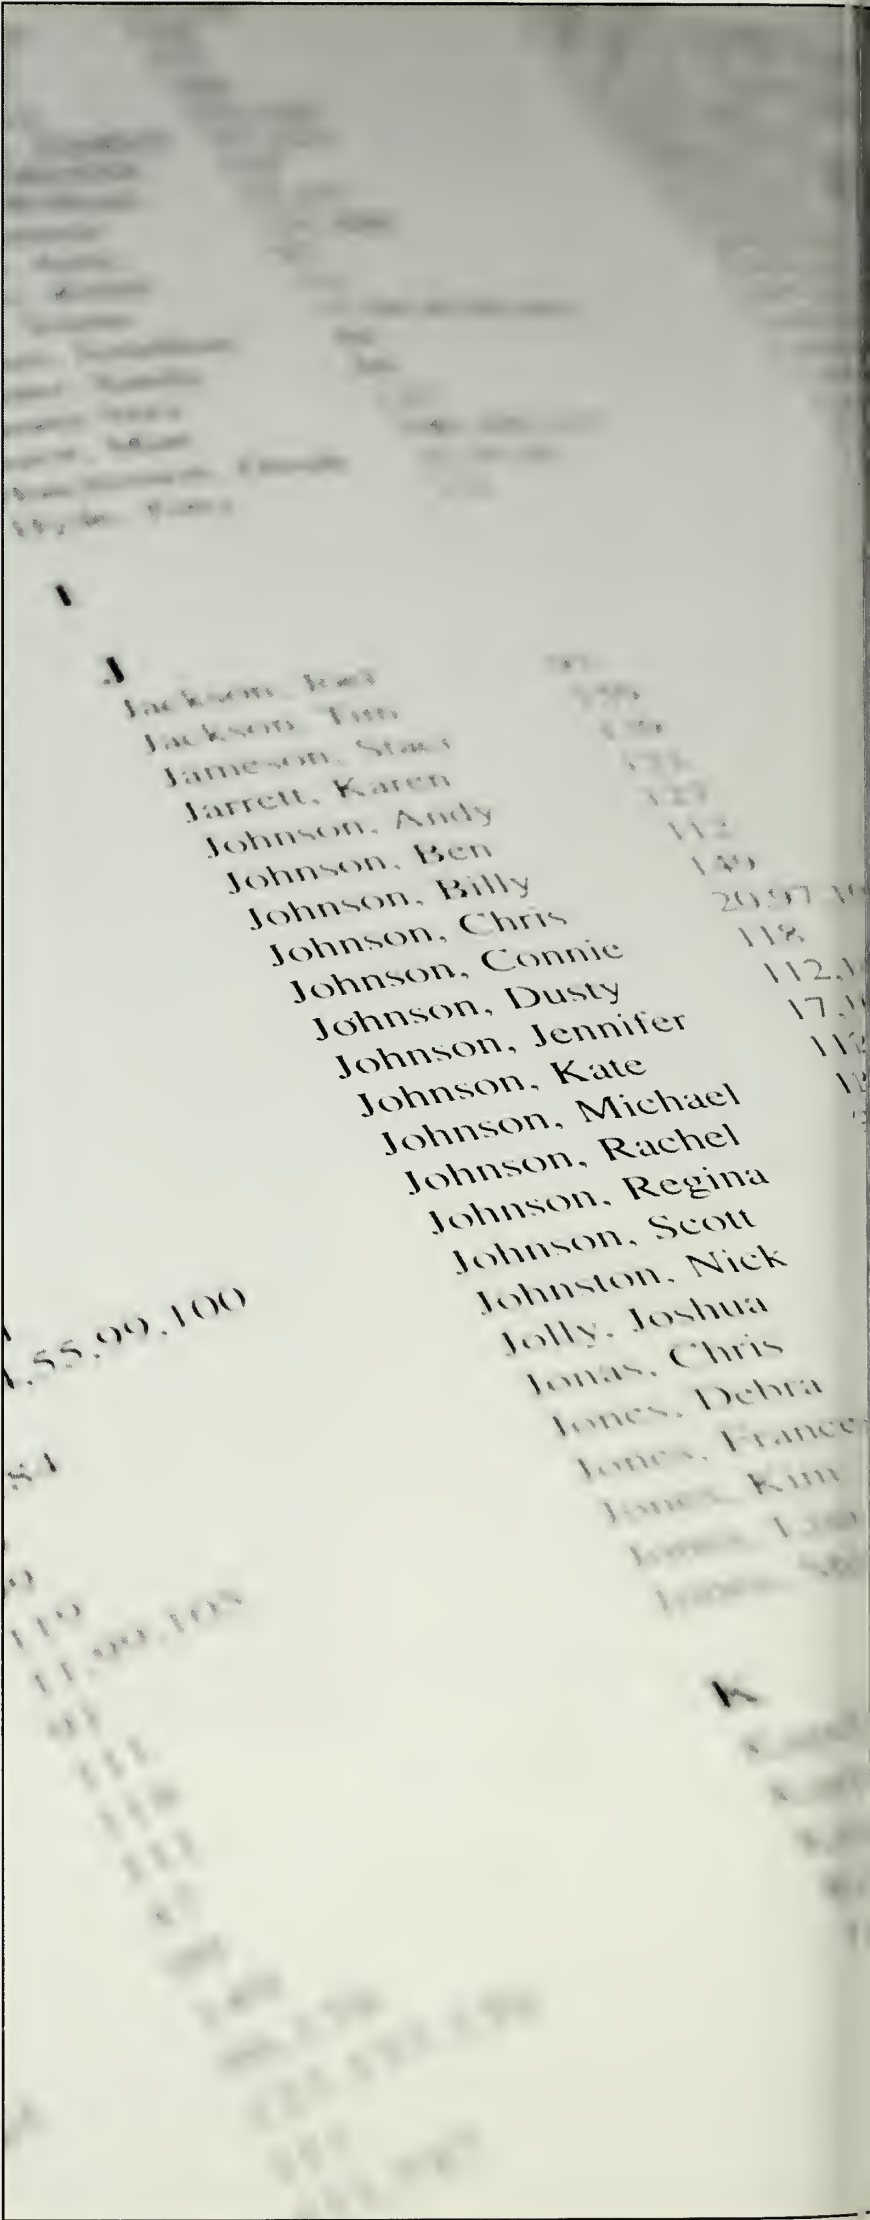

One of the best examples of the idea of collective individuality on Trevecca's campus was Robert Garrett III, known to us as "Rob G." Rob was killed in a car accident on his way back to campus to begin his senior year in the fall. A starter on the basketball team, Rob transcended the groups people place themselves into and managed to be one of the few people who was loved by everyone on campus. Always quick with a smile and a kind word even to people he didn't know, Rob was a perfect example of this year's Darda theme. He knew what it meant to be an individual, but he also knew how to be part of something bigger than himself, both on the court and on this campus. Evidence of the love Trevecca had for Rob was showed in the weeks after his death as students from all walks of life gathered in the gym to share their memories of Rob, as students and faculty signed cards and banners for Rob, and as the Trevecca community filled the church at his funeral. Through our memories of Rob and his example of reaching out to everyone he encountered, the faculty, administration, and students of Trevecca saw what it really means to be a true individual who is also a part of a collective group.

In

Memorial

Throughout this book are examples of this idea of collective individuality. Whether we see it in faces categorized by class or in candid photographs at school events, it is easy to find instances of this theme in all facets of Trevecca life. The “ads and index” section of this book is no different. Even here, collective individuality can be seen. Ads have names of students honored by loved ones, churches, or districts. These names represent individuals who exist as part of a group, whether that group is a family, a congregation, or a district. Each ad shows not only the individual nature of each name but also how each of us fits into collectives. In the index we find every person in this book categorized and listed by last name. Here also we see individuals grouped together, not only by last name, but by the index itself. The index represents every individual person in the entire book. Individuals, yes, but without even one of these individuals the collective index and even this book would not be the same. Without even one individual who has spent time on this campus, our collective life as Trevecca would seem much emptier.

Mike,
We love you and are proud of you. You have always been determined and have worked so hard to achieve your goals—and you did it again! We know God has special plans for you and will continue to lead you to do awesome things for him (Jeremiah 29:11 NIV). Always remember, you are special and you are loved!

Much love and happiness,
Mom and Dad

I've always looked up to you and followed your footsteps as the most influential role model in my life. You have taught me so much, and I have lived my life after you (same youth group, school, jeep, job, etc.). All the time people recognize me as "Mike's little sister," and I'm filled with pride as I think about all the people whose lives you have touched. I have so much to thank you for, but mainly for helping me become who I am today. Thank you for being you and for living the life that you have. Congratulations on everything and for the life ahead of you!

I love you, Mike. Lindsey
P.S. You'll always be MY big brother.

Mike,
Congratulations on this accomplishment! Your hard work, dedication, and perseverance have paid off. I am confident any goal you set in the future will be accomplished when you apply the same commitment as you have to your education. You have a bright future ahead, and you make us proud!

Love, Kristy

The Trevecca Nazarene University Yearbook
The 2005 Darda

Colophon

The 2005 Darda, volume 81, was created by the Darda staff at Trevecca Nazarene University and printed by Herff Jones Publishing Co. in Montgomery, Alabama. The publishing representative was Mary Harris. Individual student portraits were taken by J. Christopher Photography, Inc. Athletics photography was provided by Bill Thorup, Xpress Studios.

Typography

All body copy is 12-point Cheltenham. All captions are 12-point Unitus Condensed. Headlines are 36-point Function Light. All divider page copy is 12-point Goudy Sans.

Cover

The cover is a four-color lithograph designed and photographed by Joshua Shope.

Photography

All staff photographs were taken using a Canon 300-D Digital Rebel. All staff photographs taken by Megan Carden, Eric Mayle, and Joshua Shope.

Production

The 2005 Darda was produced on Dell personal computers using Adobe PageMaker 7.0, Adobe Photoshop 7.0, and HJ Imagen. The press-run was six-hundred and fifty-three books. Inquiries can be sent to darda@trevecca.edu. Copyright © 2005, the Darda staff and Trevecca Nazarene University. All rights reserved.
